AMERICAN SCHOOL AT ATHENS

1900

THE AMERICAN SCHOOL OF CLASSICAL STUDIES AT ATHENS was founded by the Archaeological Institute of America, in 1881, and is supported by the coöperation of leading American Universities and Colleges. No charge for tuition is made to graduates of the supporting institutions; other students are required to pay a fee of $25 per annum for tuition and library privileges. Two Fellowships, with a stipend of $600 each, are awarded on examination, which, in 1901, will be held on March 14-16; the Agnes Hoppin Memorial Fellowship, with a stipend of $1000, is awarded without an examination to the woman applicant who is deemed most worthy of it. The library of the School contains more than 3000 carefully selected volumes.

The Director of the School is Professor RUFUS B. RICHARDSON, Ph.D., and Professor EDWARD D. PERRY, Ph.D., of Columbia University, is Professor of the Greek Language and Literature for 1900-1901. In 1901-1902 Professor PAUL SHOREY, Ph.D., head of the department of Greek in the University of Chicago, will serve the School as Professor of the Greek Language and Literature.

The Nineteenth Annual Report of the School will be published in a supplementary number to the fourth volume of the Journal of the Institute.

For further information, address the Chairman of the Managing Committee,

Professor THOMAS D. SEYMOUR,

Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

AMERICAN SCHOOL IN ROME

1900

THE AMERICAN SCHOOL OF CLASSICAL STUDIES IN ROME (Via Gaeta, 2) offers to graduates in arts of American colleges, and, under exceptional circumstances, to other persons of marked qualifications, instruction and assistance, among the most inspiring surroundings, in advanced classical and archaeological studies. Regular courses of lectures and practical exercises, chiefly in the field or in the museums, are given by the resident American instructors, and by distinguished foreign specialists. Liberal opportunities for study are afforded in the great museums and libraries. Archaeological excursions are arranged for and conducted. The Director of the School is Professor RICHARD NORTON; the Professor of Latin for 1900-1901 is Professor FRANCIS W. KELSEY, Ph.D., of the University of Michigan; for 1901-1902, Professor FRANK FROST ABBOTT, Ph.D., of the University of Chicago.

Tuition is free to graduates of "coöperating colleges." Two Fellowships in Classical Archaeology, each of $600, and one in Christian Archaeology, of $500, are awarded on competitive examination, which, in 1901, will be held on March 12-14.

For further information, and for copies of Reports and Circulars, address the Chairman of the Managing Committee,

Professor ELMER TRUESDELL MERRILL,

Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn.
